

JOHN D. JOHNSON COMMISSIONED

Plans were revealed by Hunton law firm at Miami's Black police museum on to completing the bronze bust as a separate project. The bronze is expected to be completed in the fall. Owens said he's happy to sculpt Johnson's bust for multiple reasons. "I get to deploy my skills

“We felt that recognizing a pioneer like Justice Johnson and the case, I'm one who had the opportunity, I'd even go so far as to say that I don't have the right to fail." Johnson didn't have the right to fail, either, according to history. Johnson was raised in wrote an article entitled "City of Miami honors its black legal pioneers : "On April 19, 1950, City of Miami Commissioner Robert L. Floyd nominated Lawson E. Thomas (deceased) to be a municipal judge. He was unanimously

LEGAL CASE STUDY

Hunton Andrews Kurth, LLP Celebrates its 20 Years in the Community in a Less Conventional Way

The Objectives

The managing partner of the Miami office and one of the location's founding partners called EvClay Public Relations to help brainstorm and develop a plan that would help highlight the firm's connection and roots in Miami while giving back to the community it calls home.

The Work

The firm played a key role in celebrating the Miami office's 20th anniversary, organizing events like a scholarship for a minority student, commissioning a bust for Judge John D. Johnson, a pioneer Black judge, and a seminar benefiting local nonprofits. We assisted in venue research for the bust announcement reception at the Black Police Precinct Courthouse and Museum in historic Overtown. We ensured media turnout, created a commemorative video, and provided support for a nonprofit seminar, including guest invitations and media coverage.

QUICK CLIENT WINS

Commemorative Video

Play video.

Community Involvement

Media Coverage

View coverage.

Final Results

Hunton's Miami office successfully celebrated its 20th anniversary throughout the year in a lasting and meaningful way. The events were well-received by the community and brought professionals from across the city together to honor others alongside Hunton. Their message of giving back to the community they call home was echoed in the media.